Dr. Wilfred Wong, President, Sands China Ltd. said: "We are very grateful to have been recognised with this prestigious design award. We were fortunate to have the benefit of David's impeccable style and taste in designing the suites. Guests will be able to literally step into his luxurious lifestyle, immersing themselves in the celebrity experience. This acknowledgement confirms our efforts, attention to detail and quality of craftsmanship."

David Beckham commented: "We are delighted that Suites by David Beckham at The Londoner Hotel have received this award. I was thrilled to have the opportunity to create the suites with luxury and comfort as a priority as well as to collaborate with such incredible teams. It has been a great project to work on and something I feel very proud of. I can't wait to be able to visit and see them for myself."

Ranging from 113 to 298 square metres, the suites reflect the best of the British star's discerning style and sophistication and feature all the home comforts he enjoys when travelling. Divided into two distinct schemes of navy blue and British racing green, Beckham's favourite colours, they contain subtle references to his renowned sporting career, personal style and interests – football, photography, tailoring and male grooming.

The largest of the suites boasts a small whisky and karaoke bar, inspired by Beckham's interest in whisky and cut crystal glasses, and incorporates features of some of David Collins Studio's most renowned London hospitality projects, including The Connaught Bar and Claridge's Bar.

The International Hotel & Property Awards are held to identify and highlight global design excellence. Hosted by design et al, the leading UK interior design magazine, voting is open to industry professionals as well as design et al readers, clients and customers.
